Sir Arthur Evans is one of the great, albeit sometimes controversial figures of archaeology. Arthur Evans not only excavated the Palace of Minos, the greatest of the Cretan palaces, but he also invented the Minoan civilisation, being the first to recognise it as being a distinct civilisation all of its own. He was a powerful and controversial figure, and currently opinion is

Sir Arthur Evans' predisposition for classical era research and Homeric literature was furthered by the "revolutionary" efforts of Heinrich Schliemann at Troy in the late 19 th century. Though now scholars have determined that Schliemann's success at Troy damaged more than it salvaged, archaeology was not yet a discipline when Schliemann's efforts began.
