The most important "heresies" that the early Church faced, were a collection of sects now labelled "Gnosticism.". It was less common in the western half of the Roman Empire, and found more often in the major urban centers of the east. As such it was a threat to the "proto-orthodox" or literalist Christians, and they resolved to put an end to it by the beginning of the 4th century.

Gnostic writings flourished among certain Christian groups in the Mediterranean world until about the second century, when the Fathers of the early Church denounced them as heresy. Efforts to destroy these texts proved largely successful, resulting in the survival of very little writing by Gnostic theologians. [3]
