This chapter allows Crane to set the stage for an action which the regiment hasn't yet engaged in — an offensive charge. This offensive is a major event for the 304th, even if it is only one small battle in the larger war. Henry, on realizing that there will be a charge, comes to the realization that he is really "insignificant."

Chapter 18

One day, Matt Bonner's mule runs away, and some of the townsmen find it outside the store. They irritate the mule for fun, and Janie mutters her disapproval of their cruelty. Unbeknownst to her, Jody is standing nearby and hears her complaint. He buys the mule for five dollars so that the poor beast can rest for once in his life.
