Marx probably first came across Shakespeare in a significant way as a young man when he was courting his future wife, Jenny Von Westphalen, in the Rhineland in the 1830s. Jenny's father was a member of the progressive minority of the German aristocracy that had been radicalised by the ideas of the French Revolution, exported to the area by Napoleon's occupation a few decades earlier.

Marx's Shakespeare - Counterfire

Marx's contribution to the Oxford series effectively achieves the series's stated aims in a lively and engaging sequence of close readings in context. Students and teachers will doubtless find much of interest here, and, indeed, every teacher of
