If you need a mostly beginner book I recommend the Recorder Fun Book if you know the basics of how to count music. I used a level one piano book first so I didn't need a truly beginner book for her. The Fun Book goes much more slowly learning each tone and the notes but you need to know what rests are or at least be able to figure it out from how many counts are left in the measure.

From the soprano recorder, which is about the size of a mechanical pencil, to the contrabass recorder, which is twice the length of a bass recorder, recorders come in many varieties. In particular, the type most frequently used for solos is the alto recorder, and Baroque period solo sonatas and concertos as well as the majority of contemporary sonatas are written for the instrument.

DK's How to Play the Recorder is a highly visual and user-friendly guide for anyone learning to play the recorder on their own, and it is also a perfect companion to recorder lessons. The book is structured in a way that challenges readers without overwhelming them. Notes are clearly introduced at appropriate stages with specially selected musical pieces that provide context and a sense of achievement. A range of useful hints and tips offer additional guidance and encouragement.

(Schott). Although the recorder is often the instrument with which children will make their first musical discoveries, it is also an instrument of the highest artistic merit. This series links these two extremes, providing a carefully planned pathway between first contact with the instrument and professional recorder playing. The three tutor books are suitable for use both with small groups and for individual tuition. Progress is made in small steps, placing great value on consistent work with breathing, sound production and the development of rhythmic security. Books feature carefully planned, precisely formulated exercises. Tutor Book 3 completes the range up to C3, at which point the treble recorder can be introduced.

A great first violin book for the very young student featuring extra large notation, letters inside the note heads, fingerings, plus coloring and activity pages. For multiple school orders, please contact us for a discount code good for up to 40% off the cover price at www.violinfunbook.com
